The Break.

Commissioner Emerson quoted figures to show that since the height of the epidemic, six weeks ago, when the average daily number of cases was 172, the number of cases has dropped steadily until now the daily average is only 22 or 23.

The action of private schools in postponing their opening until later dates was deplored by Commissioner Emerson. He said he had written a letter to the Ethical Culture School, which is attended by his own children, recommending September 25 as a suitable opening data. The school authorities decided, however, not to open the institution until October 16.

"I think it will be a real contribution to the general health of the city to take the 200,000 school children from their play in the streets and put them under a uniform system of life and daily medical inspection in the public schools," he madd.

In order to prove how slight is the danger of public school commismisioner Emerson analyzed by age the twenty-seven cases reported yesterday.

All but one were of children 6 years or under and all but four of children of 5 or under. One case was a boy of 14.

The Respect Parents' Fears.

School authorities intimated yesterday that if the public schools open next Monday children whose parents keep them at home will not be compelled to attend. It was said the truancy law would not be invoked until it was certain all infantile paralysis danger was past.

Gustave Straubenmuller, chairman of the Board of City Superintendents, in the absence of Supt. Maxwell said the although the health authorities felt no harm could come from the opening of the schools, the causes of the disease were so little known that the fears of the parents would be respected until it was apparent all reason for apprehension had disappeared.

Hake sure he took one of the bills to a store downstairs to be changed, leaving his wealth behit.

The bill passed muster from the store-keeper and Marcowics returned in high glee, only to find that his friends and the machine were gone. Recently he received a letter, he said, from his old friend Turziki, in Philadelphia, inviting him to become a partner in a second money making machine. At the advice of the police he wrote telling the three to meet him in Turziki's old rooms in harm could come from the opening of the subscinct of the police he wrote telling the three to meet him in Turziki's old rooms in harm could come from the opening of the subscinction.

NATIONAL COUNCIL ACTS

Resolutions Passed to Retain and Extend Our Foreign Business.

After hearing James A. Farrell resident of the United States Steel Cororation, predict that American overseas trade will surpass all records at the end of the war the National Foreign Trade Council, meeting at the Biltmore yesterday, passed several resolutions based on a study of how our normal trade can be retained and extended.

The council spoke for an American

It also advocated legislation permitting American exporters to combine, exclusively for foreign trade, as do their rivals abroad. This is an indorsement of the principle of the Webb bill, which passed by a sagacious policy.

"Since the total foreign trade of the United States normally is about one-twelfth of that of the entire world, and since both exports and imports serve the crimination possibly leading to trade wars." Possible discrimination against the United States resulting from preferential agreements among the European economic alliances was emphasized in the resolutions that were adopted.

The war was declared to make this question of the highest policy, which Congress, aided by the Tariff Commission, the State, twenty-two new cases were reported. They were distributed among the countles as follows: Occadaga, seven: Tompkins, six: Oswego, four; Westchester, three; Suffolk and Nassau, one each. One death occurred in Onondaga county.

In New Jersey there were thirty-six new cases, bringing the total to 3,448.

the House, but had trouble in the Senate and is to come up again in the next session of Congress.

Mr. Farrell, speaking as chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council.

"The present prospect is that when peace settles upon Europe there will remain two commercial groups, the members of each undertaking a system of mutual trade preferences, which may automatically create discriminations against neutrals. It would be unwise to assume as many do that the highly artificial system of commercial preferences after the war will break of its own weight.

"At the end of the conflict the United States will have the greatest gold accumulation ever possessed by a single nation. American foreign trade will surpass all records. The United States will be both the largest customer and the most formidable competitor of Europe—a powerful position if safeguarded by a sagactous policy.

The council requested the Government to safeguard the open door policy on Chins, called a great national foreign Chins, called a great national foreign trade convention to meet in Pittsburg next January, planned for an expert business man's investigation of foreign trade action likely to affect the United States, agreed to cooperate with the Government by placing all possible information at its disposal and continued its policy of offering prises to schools and colleges for essays on topics related to the merchant marins. Resolutions on the death of James J. Hill were adopted.

All parts of the United States were represented in the meeting of the council, which is non-political and non-partisan.
